Ana Rovzar is an international energy professional with experience in policy and advocacy on sustainable energy in emerging economies. Since 2012, Ana's specialty is in public relations, partnerships, and communications.

Based in Brussels, Ana is also a multilingual moderator and communicator on numerous topics. She has both organized and spoken at 40+ in-person and virtual ministerial conferences and international events across Europe, Africa and the Middle East, and has worked with multinational companies, government ministries, international organisations and NGOs.

She has provided strategic advisory to executive management, led senior representation missions and organized ministerial summits and dialogues; managed knowledge and advocacy projects and served as focal point for cooperation initiatives across various international organizations.

Having worked and lived across Europe, Africa, Latin America and the Middle East, Ana seeks to understand and shape global trends and is passionate about clean energy and climate action, sustainable development, global affairs and geopolitics.
