
JAMES LEVELLE

LONDON
SPEAKER
BUREAU

- Award-winning Filmmaker, Adventurer & Storyteller – National Geographic, Discovery Channel, BBC – Hurricane Survivor & Champion of Wild
- Human-powered Solutions to Social, Ecological & Climate Crises

James Levelle's work in the world's wildest places, together with his extraordinary 'impossible' expeditions, has earned him uncommon understanding of both the beauty and power of Nature, as well as an unshakeable faith in humankind. He hitchhiked his way 6000 miles across South America with no mobile phone, no credit card, and no cash for Discovery Channel's 6-part series, 'Free Ride' (2016). He trekked through the frozen wilds of Alaska for Discovery's hit series 'Gold Rush Trail' (2017) and risked life and limb chasing hurricanes for the BBC's 'Hurricane Man' (2018).

The following year, James sped 9000 miles from the UK to Chile... fossil fuel free... on his 'Race for the Future' expedition to document youth climate messages and deliver them in a film to the United Nations Climate conference.

James Levelle has featured in The Financial Times, The Telegraph and The Times newspapers, interviews on BBC Radio, he's had the honour of presenting the Duke of Edinburgh Gold Awards at Buckingham Palace and hosted the Royal Foundation's 'Generation Earthshot Prize' at the United Nations Climate Conference in Glasgow.

With his cheeky sense of humour and honest, engaging style James Levelle shares inspiring (sometimes terrifying) stories filled with pirates, lions, tigers, and bears (oh my!), hurricanes and human powered, zero cash, zero emission global adventures... and relates them to 'real life' in ways that offer helpful new perspectives on life's problems. Problems that can also be solved by reconsidering our relationship with Nature and remembering how 'wild' conjures that sense of wonder, curiosity, creativity and adventure in each of us.

Topics

- Adventure
- Celebrities
- Environment
- Leadership
- Mental Health
- performance
- Strategy
- Teamwork
- Wellbeing