Masterclass overview

What are the daily habits of the most outrageously successful people and companies? A commitment to realizing human potential through techniques such as: life skills, personal happiness tools, health and wellness strategies, mindfulness and meditation. This is not a spiritual fix, rather proven techniques, with abundant research on the benefits of lowering stress, increasing productivity, better decision making, improved memory and higher states of well being. Work today does not only have to imply stress, long hours, suffering and a decrease in overall happiness. These common factors cost companies billions of dollars every year. Increasingly research is showing the impact of personal and spiritual tools on the quality of employee happiness and health, all the way to driving bottom line revenues. This is not a luxury but an urgent and important need for companies!
