
Miho Noguchi

Specializing in international conferences and corporate events in Japan and abroad, Miho has served countless global companies and organizers as their multilingual event host/presenter in Japanese-English, and French for nearly 20 years.

She started out in interpretation and translation after honing her foreign language skills in English and French. Her subsequent career was as a radio broadcaster in central Japan. Miho's voice is widely recognized by tens of thousands of Japanese as the former voice behind GoogleMaps GPS in Japanese.

Miho's biggest strength was her public speaking skills and her ability to connect people from different cultural and language communities. Working both on screen and stage, today Miho represents her global corporate clients and communicates their key messages to their audiences and customers effectively in a warm and personable manner with an infectious passion and energy.

Miho was crowned Mrs. Japan Globe in 2017 and competed in the international grand finals. Her passion has led her to speak to youth groups and women who seek to develop leadership in their communities.

She is also a voice-over talent and a Roger Love Method Coaching certified speaking voice coach trained directly by Roger Love, America's No.1 celebrity voice coach. Her mission is to help ESL (English as Second Language) speakers develop their voice and use it to attract and serve their ideal clients so they can increase their influence and their income.
