Nouriel Roubini is the Chairman of Roubini Global Economics, an independent, global macroeconomic and market strategy research firm. It has been named one of the best economics resources by BusinessWeek, Forbes, Wall Street Journal and the Economist.

Roubini is Professor of Economics at New York University's Stern School of Business. He has extensive policy experience as well as broad academic credentials. He served as the senior economist for international affairs on the White House Council of Economic Advisors (1998-2000) and then the senior advisor to the Under Secretary for International Affairs at the U.S. Treasury Department, helping to resolve the Asian and global financial crises. The International Monetary Fund, the World Bank and numerous other prominent public and private institutions have drawn upon his consulting expertise.

Roubini has published numerous theoretical, empirical and policy papers on international macro-economic issues and co-authored the books "Political Cycles: Theory and Evidence" and "Bailouts or Bail-ins? Responding to Financial Crises in Emerging Markets" and "Crisis Economics: A Crash Course in the Future of Finance".

Roubini's views on global economic issues are widely cited by the media, and he is a frequent commentator on business news programs.
