At ten years old, he entered a Buddhist monastery in Rajgir near Nalanda University. He studied traditional Indo-Tibetan and Japanese Buddhism and was ordained by His Holiness the Dalai Lama who is his spiritual mentor. He studied under the guidance of several great teachers. In 2003 he completed his graduate studies in Comparative Philosophy of Religion at Harvard University.

As Founding Director and President of the Prajnopaya Institute and Foundation, Priyadarshi promotes the provision of care for all regardless of ethnicity, religion or gender, by developing innovative health, education and social welfare programmes. His endeavours include developing projects that promote humanitarian aid, conflict resolution and cultural understanding in countries such as India, Nepal, Japan, USA, and Sri Lanka to benefit their disadvantaged populations. He was Project Advisor to a team of architects from MIT, Harvard University Graduate School of Design, and Cambridge University, developing Tsunami Safe Houses for families in Sri Lanka. The foundation has also been working to curtail tuberculosis and bring health care to rural areas in India.

He has been actively involved in inter-religious dialogue with religious leaders such as Pope John Paul II, Archbishop Desmond Tutu, Pope Benedict XVI, and HH Gyalwang Karmapa. He promotes contemplative learning beyond religious boundaries.

He serves on the Board of several academic and humanitarian organisations, and lectures internationally on philosophy, science, inspiration, ethics and socio-political thought. He also teaches traditional Buddhist philosophy and practice through the Prajnopaya Institute.
